Beyond impressive numbers and accolades, the true significance of the Red Education and Check Point partnership lies in its tangible impact on the global cybersecurity landscape.

The industry continues to face a critical cybersecurity skills gap, with a shortage of qualified professionals leaving organisations increasingly exposed to cyber threats. Red Education's specialised expertise in delivering Check Point training has been instrumental in bridging this gap, empowering cybersecurity engineers with the practical skills and certifications they need to protect their organisations and infrastructure. Together, Red Education and Check Point have helped shape a more capable global cybersecurity workforce and, by extension, a more secure digital environment.

The ten-year milestone of this partnership in 2024 marked a decade of collaborative innovation. As a Global Platinum Elite training partner, Red Education has worked closely with Check Point not only to deliver certification training, but to shape the content itself, ensuring programs are rigorous, up-to-date, and aligned to real-world challenges. This level of collaboration sets the partnership apart from others in the industry.

Importantly, this partnership has also created a platform for progress. In 2024, Red Education launched its inaugural Women in Cybersecurity Training Scholarships, offering fully funded, entry-level Check Point certification training to four aspiring women. This initiative highlights the gender gap in cybersecurity and aims to inspire broader participation from women.

This partnership is more than a training alliance: it's a driver of innovation, empowerment, and lasting change in the cybersecurity sector.
