The Autistic Culture Podcast is not just a podcast — it's a cultural reformation. Hosted by late-diagnosed author Dr. Angela Kingdon and autistic clinician Matt Lowry, LPP, this independently produced series boldly reframes autism as a culture, not a condition — and invites the world to rethink everything it thought it knew.

Since January 2023, we've released over 100 episodes that blend pop culture analysis, historical reexamination, and irreverent humor. From Freddie Mercury Is Autistic to Monster High Is Autistic, we uncover the hidden neurodivergent brilliance in the stories, art, fashion, media, and icons shaping our world.

This is not a podcast about autism. It's a culture podcast by and for autistic people — and it's redefining representation. Our audience includes late-diagnosed adults, neurodivergent creatives, clinicians, and proud weirdos who describe the show as "life-changing," "healing," and "better than therapy."

With 300,000+ downloads and zero outside funding, we've built a global cultural archive one episode at a time — celebrating echolalia, monotropism, and neurodivergent joy as valid and vibrant. We don't translate autism for outsiders — we center it as the culture it is.

This is the culture show you didn't know you were missing.
