A voluntary tech project led by TCS employees has become a game-changing sustainability tool for sports events. TCS, a long-standing marathon sponsor, partnered with the Council for Responsible Sport to develop ReScore – a free, cloud-based platform that simplifies and accelerates sustainability certification process for events.

Built by a small core TCS team, ReScore was developed entirely through pro bono effort – over 4,000 hours contributed during evenings and weekends. Weekly meetings, GitHub task management, and a user-first development approach ensured fast, responsive delivery.

It enables real-time collaboration between event organisers and Council verifiers, streamlining data collection and improving transparency. Since its 2022 launch, ReScore has exceeded every target:

- Certification timelines reduced by over 50%.
- 53 events certified using the app by the end of 2024, with 12 more underway.
- 1,718 volunteers upskilled.
- Helped the Council move from a negative to positive financial position.

Running on AWS, the app offers cost-efficiency and scalability for events of all sizes. And recent updates, like colour-coded criteria and rich text evidence fields, make the tool even easier to use.

ReScore sets a new standard for how purpose-driven tech can deliver lasting societal impact and demonstrates the power of volunteer-led innovation.
